LITERATURE REVIEW:

CONCEPT OF CSR:

There is no specific definition for corporate social responsibility, it is a way of doing business through which business organizations can contribute towards the social good. It basically means what companies actually do with their profits, in terms of going beyond philanthropy and focusing on economic, social and environmental impacts and how they influence its relationship with their important stakeholders related to workplace, marketplace, supply chain and society at large (Din, 2016).

According to the definition by the World Business Council for Sustainable Development in regards to sustainability and growth which is important for social welfare, CSR means the commitment of the business organizations towards contribution for sustainable development for the society (Jamali & Mirshak, 2006). As per European union CSR means integrating social and economic objectives by the organizations while performing their business operations in order to fulfill their responsibilities towards stakeholders on voluntary basis. CSR apparently is divided into two major approaches—micro and macro. As per micro approach, it is the responsibility of every company to fulfill social obligations towards the society. Whereas as per macro approach of CSR points out that its not the corporate how are actually responsible, rather it’s the government that should work for social welfare programs and achieve the country’s social goals (Singh, 2010).

According to UNIDO, "Corporate social duty implies mix of social and ecological concerns in their business tasks and fulfilling their responsibilities towards stakeholders. Through this an organization accomplishes parity of financial, natural and social goals to meet desires for investors and its relevant stakeholders.

CARROLL’S PYRAMID OF CORPORATE SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

As per Carroll (1983), “Corporate Social responsibility involves the conduct of a business so that it is economically profitable, law abiding, ethical and socially supportive. To be socially responsible then means that profitability and obedience to the law foremost conditions when discussing the firm’s ethics and the extent to which it supports the society in which it exists with contribution of money time and talent.”

Legal Responsibilities means that businesses should not only operate for earning profits but are also expected to follow the legal regulations promulgated by state, local and federal governments.

Ethical responsibilities includes norms, standards and expectation that stakeholders (such as employees, consumers, shareholders and the community) regard as fair.

Philanthropic responsibilities focuses on fulfilling the charitable expectation of the society.

Economic responsibilities means that major responsibility of business is to produce goods and services needed by society, and sell them to earn profit.

- EVOLUTION OF CSR:

The notion of social responsibility of business has its origins from ancient times, when Kautilya’s Arthashastra and pre – Christian era philosophers professed that business should follow ethical principles in their engagements.
Concept of Social responsibility has for long time been defined and has been conceptualized in many ways by different writers. In 1950s Bowen was regarded as a pioneer of the CSR concept and he first explained that it is the necessary obligations of businessmen to follow those policies, make those decisions and implement those actions which are required in terms of being valuable for society. In the 60s the discussion about CSR started being pointed out as an important tool for profitability. In the early 80s the concept became a popular tool in order to create to create wealth by the business organization.

Further in 1990s concept of CSR encompassed a wide range of related to economic, legal, ethical and philanthropic (discretionary) activities. Carroll pointed out that the economic activities are the most important for business and further there is need for fulfilling legal, ethical and philanthropic activities which is known as the Pyramid of Corporate Social Responsibility (Schwartz & Carroll, 2003)

Corporate Social Responsibility has undergone four stages of evolution in India.

- Ethical model (1930-1950) - based on the trusteeship principle in which organizations act as fiduciaries of stakeholders
- Statist model (1950-1970) - includes statutory requirements under which organizations works effectively
- Liberal model (1970- 1990) - focuses on economic objective ie to maximize wealth and profitability
- Stakeholder model 1990- present- the focus is on the triple bottom line effect ie taking care for people, planet and profit

Sustainable development focuses on Triple Bottom Line (TBL) concept that was introduced in 1987 in Brundtland Commission. It was officially named by John Elkington in 1994. This theory is also known as 3Ps or three pillars. It states that a company should be responsible for three parameters: Profit, People and Planet, that is economic, social and environmental responsibility.

The objective of CSR and sustainability policy of NHPC revolves around preparing and implementing policies that focuses on sustainable development and therefore several initiatives are taken that focuses on economic, social and environmental parameters.

Economic aspect: the economic part of CSR not only focuses on earning profit, but also on utilization of that profit. The economic aspect of CSR is related with the direct and indirect economic benefits of company provides to the local community and other stakeholders (Uddin, Hassan & Tarique, 2008). The economic dimension is based on three main aspects. NHPC has shown a tremendous economic performance over the years and had effectively utilized the profit earning in fulfilling its responsibilities towards the internal and external stakeholders. The economic efficiency is judged through its overall profitability, sales and net worth over the years (NHPC 43rd Annual Report 2018-19, 2019).

Objective 3: Linking Profit maximization with CSR and Sustainable initiatives

NHPC’s CSR & Sustainability Policy will form the basis for conducting its business. It aims to integrate CSR and sustainable initiatives with the objectives of profit maximization (NHPC 43rd Annual Report 2018-19, 2019). CSR can increase both long term profitability and sustainability as well as enhance the reputation. Consider the impact the business has on its stakeholders, therefore local communities, employees, NGOs, customers and suppliers. The more the profits the organization will earn the more they will spend in socially responsible activities and for the benefit everyone in the community (Uddin, Hassan & Tarique, 2008). As per Carroll, 1991, If the business described the motives of CSR then company will meet the need of the society. An organization CSR can be compliance driven, profitability and holistic.

Based on the above objective a hypothesis is formulated:
HO: the amount spent on CSR and sustainable initiatives has no impact the profitability of the firm
H 1: the amount spent on CSR and sustainable initiatives impact the profitability of the firm.

The CSR total score and the scores of the four dimensions of CSR i.e. Operational, Economic, Environmental and Social were correlated and regressed against the 5 year average of ROI. The results are briefly being presented here:

The pearson correlation between CSR expenditures and Net profit of NHPC for the period of ten year i.e. (2009-10 to 2018-19) is 0.302942. This shows that there is positive correlation but not so significant relation.

Regression analysis:
Fig 1 shows linear regression line between actual CSR expenditure of NHPC and Net profit of 10 years period from 2009-10 to 2018-19. The line has a positive slope (b) and positive intercept (a). The values are dispersed around the regression line. Coefficient of regression was found to be of very small value and indicated that the relationship between CSR and Net Profit is positive but very weak.

* result concusion

The result of the correlation and regression analysis between actual CSR expenditure and Net Profit of NHPC for the of 10years is not negative but also is statistically significant. Hence, the hypothesis is not proved.

Limitation: The study is limited as it related to the detailed case study analysis of NHPC and its CSR expenditure impact on profitability.

A road ahead: a larger study with more companies can be undertaken.
